

Splinterfields is an initiative fostering collaborative and agile learning through a programme of workshops, study groups and field tests. It is open to artists, designers, technologists and other generalists curious to explore tools and mindware for experiments in contemporary culture and daily life. Splinterfields is organised by Constant, FoAM, nadine and OKNO, four Brussels-based organisations active in the fields of technological and media arts.